Music for the Campaign. At the monster Douglas meeting in Philadelphia the following song was song with great enthusiasm.

It is the best campaign song we have seen, and as far ahead of the rail-splitting dowerels of the Lincolnities, as a statesman is of a clown: Men may rail about their Lincoln;

Of their Hamlin they may tell; Of their Everett may bluster, While they brag about their Bell; But the Democrate have Donaths. Who is armed with Truth and Right, And his soldiers are the voters, In their majesty and might.

On the records of our country There is not a brighter name Than the honored name of Douglas, Who shall ever live for fame. He will stand a loyal statesman, Famed for windom, marked with wit, Far above the man who's honored

For a pile of rails he split With the stars and st. nes above us, Floating o'er the brave and free, We will vote for Stephen Douglas, Who our Commodore shall be; And our "Ship of State," in safety on a O'er the stormy sea he'll sail, While, before the mast, Abe Lincoln
